Britain Abandons Her Deterrent

Economic Problems to Receive Priority Henceforward

By PHILIP HANE

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The first step by Britain to abandon her own deterrent, in the way of a military deterrent, is the decision to stop development of the Blue Streak, the first of a series of intermediate-range ballistic missiles planned as the rocket carrier for Britain's nuclear punch.

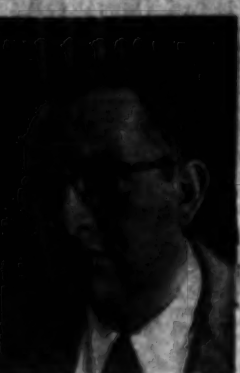

Strengthening the vulnerability of Great Britain as one reason for dropping Blue Streak, the defense establishment has decided that the deterrent force of jet bombers would be a more reliable deterrent for some years to come, and that the Blue Streak, which had been developed as a deterrent force, was not a deterrent force at all. The Blue Streak, which is being developed for the U.S. Air Force, is a missile which is launched from a submarine and is capable of striking targets in the U.S. and Europe. It is a missile which is launched from a submarine and is capable of striking targets in the U.S. and Europe. It is a missile which is launched from a submarine and is capable of striking targets in the U.S. and Europe.

to pull out from trouble spots and they are concentrating on long-range planning. The only force they seem to conceive themselves as needing are expeditionary forces for some sort of very limited campaign that certainly would not entail a direct clash with Russia.

This sort of thinking about Britain's future military planning is common not only at the Pentagon but among experts of the various armed forces conditions in Congress. The trend is not viewed as a weakening of the alliance but rather as leading inevitably to a change of the role of the U.S. forces in Europe.

As for assuming that Britain may acquire the Skybolt, this is considered here as a face-saving half-way measure between the U.S. forces in Europe and the U.S. forces in Europe. It is a face-saving half-way measure between the U.S. forces in Europe and the U.S. forces in Europe. Rothschild Group Promotes Many-Sided Cultural Effort

PROF. DON PATINKIN

"Money, Interest and Prices" is the title of a book by Prof. Don Patinkin, a member of the Rothschild Group. The book is a study of the economic and social conditions of the Jewish community in the United States.

PROF. MAX KURREIN

For his great contributions in the field of mechanical engineering and the education of engineers, Prof. Max Kurrein is a member of the Rothschild Group.

PROF. S. AGMON

For his great contributions in the field of mathematical physics and the education of scientists, Prof. S. Agmon is a member of the Rothschild Group.

American Settlers Favour Aliyah

Editor, The Jerusalem Post

Mr. — I have read with surprise Prof. Kurrein's report in your issue of April 4 that the Rothschild Group of the Association of American and Canadian Jews in Israel have threatened to break away from the Association in protest against its failure to issue a call for immigration from North America at its Convention.

The opinions expressed in your article can only reflect the feelings of some individuals and do not represent the general opinion of the members of the Association who have settled on the land.

It is true, as elsewhere in agricultural settlements where there are American Jews, we are the Association as a positive factor in helping the individual deal with his problems of absorption. Without personal attention to these details, no American Jew could be successful.

During the past few years, American settlers and tourists have come to rely more and more on the advice and guidance of our Association, as evidenced by our increased membership and the activities of the national office in the "New York Times".

Unfortunately, the impression created by your report in the "New York Times" that our Association is opposed to further Aliyah, has caused some embarrassment to our members and this is more than likely to be a hindrance to the work of the Association.

It is true that the Association has not yet been able to increase and help immigration from the States. It is carefully building a course of action which is based on the principle of "Aliyah as a business".

Many people, including myself, have a particular admiration and liking for pure research, unhampered by considerations of the world in which we live. Fortunately, however, we are not so narrow-minded as to believe that pure mathematics is of no interest, except from the point of view of scholarship.

The members of the Rothschild Group were engaged in various defense tasks for the Yishuv by day and in guard duties at night. Bloch presided over all this with his characteristic mixture of determination and calm.

In a sense, he had had single-handedly to keep the Rothschild Group going through the war years. Weisman had been in London since the time the Rothschild Group was founded. The Rothschild Group was founded in 1938, and it was in 1938 that the Rothschild Group was founded.

Perhaps it was the phenomenon of scientific shyness that was the real basis of his success. When there was a question of the reasonable rights of any member of the staff it made no difference to him whether it was a high-ranking scientist or a humblest laborer. He was never given by promises, indeed he never promised to do anything unless he could see the way to do it.

KEEPING POSTED

A MAN who attended a festive service at the beautiful Italian synagogue in Jerusalem says that when he had been there a few minutes a tourist dropped into a seat next to him, vying red in the face and wiping his brow. Our friend noticed this particularly as the Yiddish, I go up and ask him if he knows where this place is. So he says he is going there himself, and then he starts asking me where it is from, all very nice and Jewish. There is another fellow with him who doesn't say anything. We come up to the synagogue and there is a reception committee out and I ask who they are expecting. They don't say anything and then they all come up and I see for this guy I'm walking with and somebody murmurs he's the President. So I ask you, how was I to know he was your President?

A SMALL girl at a Passover celebration with a good deal of difficulty spelled out the name on the wine bottle: "Chateau Windsor." When her father explained to her in turn the meaning of "Chateau" and "Windsor," she said she thought it should be simpler to call it "Sikh Diner."

When a certain grandmother with a son in Tel Aviv and a daughter in Jerusalem decided at the last moment that she was going to spend Passover in Jerusalem after all she was very unhappy to discover that it was too late for a place in a cheap hotel in Jerusalem. She was too late for her son to take her to Jerusalem in his small car because that would make him late for the children's seder, and too late for her son-in-law to fetch her in his small car, for the same reason. After a certain amount of telephoning a perfectly good solution was found. The two cars started out at the same time, kept an eagle eye on the road for each other. After the first half-hour transferred the happy grandmother from car to car when they met, and each hurried home again for his own seder in good time.

Remember that horrible April Well, while we are on the subject of Windsor we recall the tale of a Jew who was to be baptized by Queen Elizabeth. He was told that she had been made to learn Hebrew as a child and determined to test her knowledge. As he went for the ceremony he murmured the first Hebrew words that came into his head. It was around Passover and the phrase recited to be "Mikichilim hachilim mikichilim." The Queen was puzzled by the muttering and turned to one of the purification-instructors. "Why is this knight different from all other knights?"

A FRIEND who came back that he got talking with a lady who had just been to Greece, but had not cared much for the place. "I'm sure Harry and I are going to like it better," she said. "What was the place called?" "I don't know," Harry said. "Well, in this Athens they showed us nothing but ruins."
